Petition Protesting New City Jail Location

A petition is being circulated this week in Ocean Beach that will go to PWA officials protesting the advancement of funds to the City of San Diego for a jail near foot of Market street, as is being requested at this time by City Manager Flack.

There is not a united opinion of the city council, and business leaders of the city, that a new site on the Market street tidelands should be used for this purpose, many favoring the establishment of a new city jail in part of the civic center building or in connection with the county on the upper floors of the present court house when that structure is vacated by the administrative offices.

Local sponsors of the fishing pier project are of the opinion money on hand now in the unappropriated fund can be used to better advantage on the pier project, than on a city jail, where the city manager's office now contemplates constructing one.

Nation Mourns Death Of Great Woman

A colorful career was ended Tuesday night with the passing of Mme. Ernestine Schumann Heink, in her Hollywood home at the age of 75.

This beloved diva was born in Austria, near Prague, June 15, 1861, and gave unselfishly all her life of her wonderful voice and the proceeds from opera contracts and concert engagements. Her thought was ever of family, friends, the public and boys of the army and navy, to whom she especially endeared herself during the world war.

Words cannot express the love held for Mme. Schumann Heink by the great American people and her true personality is expressed in her recent desire: "I have so much sunshine to give, I know I can make people laugh and be happy. I pray the good God to give me four or five more years—it is long enough to do a little bit of good, anyway."

AUDIENCE RESPONSIBLE FOR STANDARDS

The importance of public opinion in influencing the character of motion pictures was stresst by Dr. Vera George last Thursday when she was presented to the Ocean Beach Woman's club by Mrs. Lilian D. Dodds, chairman of the day. Dr. George, who is the county federation chairman of better films, emphasized the responsibility of the audience in raising the standards of film entertainment, which must be done by discriminating attendance and written expressions of opinion to the studios as well as thru the better films conference of the federated clubs. In connection with the last method, blank forms for critical analysis of films were distributed

In discussing the educational and cultural value of some of the outstanding pictures, Dr. George pointed out that some of the greatest music is now brought to the people by such stars as Lawrence Tibbett, Lily Pons, and Grace Moore. Besides music, the people and geography of foreign countries are presented with a greater clarity than is possible in travel books.

Dr. George, in summary, said the standard and type of pictures are the immediate and vital concern of the audience; the improvement in technique (color photography was especially noted) rests with the producers.

The monthly reports of nine important groups are becoming recognized as standard guides to current films. These include the General Federation of Women's clubs, California congress of Parents and Teachers, Inc., the National society of daughters of American Revolution, National council of Jewish women, Women's University club, Southern California council of Federated church women, California Federation of Business and Professional women's clubs, and American Legion auxiliary. To be placed on their mailing list, send a card to 28 West 44th street, New York City.

Supplementing the topic of the day, Mrs. Lillian Hartvigsen, accompanied by Mrs. Dodds, sang a group of songs from late motion pictures, including "Trail of the Lonesome Pine" from the picture of the same name; "Would You" from the picture "San Francisco," a hit from the "Big Broadcast of 1937": "Love in Your Eyes", and "Rendevous with You."

For Your Datebook

At an unusual open meeting of the study department next Monday evening Miss Margaret Rankin, librarian, will review "Mexican Interlude" by Joseph Henry Jackson, eminent radio book critic. Usually open only to club members, the public is urged to take advantage of this meeting which promises to be one of the most interesting of the season. The time is 8 p. m. Nov. 23 at the Ocean Beach Woman's club. Mrs. Frank Barks is hostess for the review.

Bridge Again Social Highlite

One of the most elaborate social affairs of the season was the benefit bridge-tea given Tuesday at the Elks' club by the Daughters of the British Empire, Lord Renfrew chapter.

Richly shaded autumn flowers, intermingled with British and American flags, provided a colorful motif which was used thruout the rooms.

Abel, J. Gooch, T. A. Johns, W. Miles, V. Neely and Dale Parks of San Diego. Mrs. Burns will be the hostess two weeks hence.

At the business meeting Mrs. Ivan Finn was appointed nominating committee chairman for the December election.

Parties of the Week

The Turner Kline home, 4733 Saratoga avenue, was the setting for a delightful Saturday afternoon of musical games and piano recital when Mrs. Cora Wilkerson, of Chula Vista, and her piano pupils were hostesses to the San Diego Ladies string quartet. Following the entertainment, refreshments were served.

Twelve young musicians enjoyed the affair, those honored being Cleo Loesser, Linora Korn, Turner Kline, Nina Kline.

Miss Alice Cunningham entertained the alumnae chapter of Delta Chi Phi sorority at a social meeting Tuesday evening. Refreshments were served from a table centered with white roses to Maxine Harris, Virginia Myers, Nada Moshier, Alice Cunningham; Mmes. Clifford Walker, Ralph Webster, Abendroth, R. Shanks, R. Hale, D. Taylor, D. Keeney and Denis.

The business meeting was followed by an informal evening during which refreshments were served.

Those present were Misses Betty Cameron, Grace Oliver, Charlotte Bradbury, Addie Fish, Julia Kelly, Barbara Bence, and Martha Sterne.

New Home on Coronado Avenue

The attractive Spanish home being built on Coronado avenue will be occupied by the M. L. Sternes. They expect the house to be completed shortly after the holidays.

Last Forum Considers Social Trends

One of the most vital problems confronting us today is the need of adjusting our social institutions to scientific progress. This, in effect, was the theme of the forum meeting Tuesday morning at the Ocean Beach Woman's club, when John R. Lyons led the discussion based on "Recent Social Trends", a bulky but very interesting and valuable compilation made by ex-president Hoover's research committee headed by Ogburn. Half a million dollars were spent on this work, which has been quoted at length by such economists as Stuart Chase and by many sociological writers. Numerous abbreviated forms have also been made.

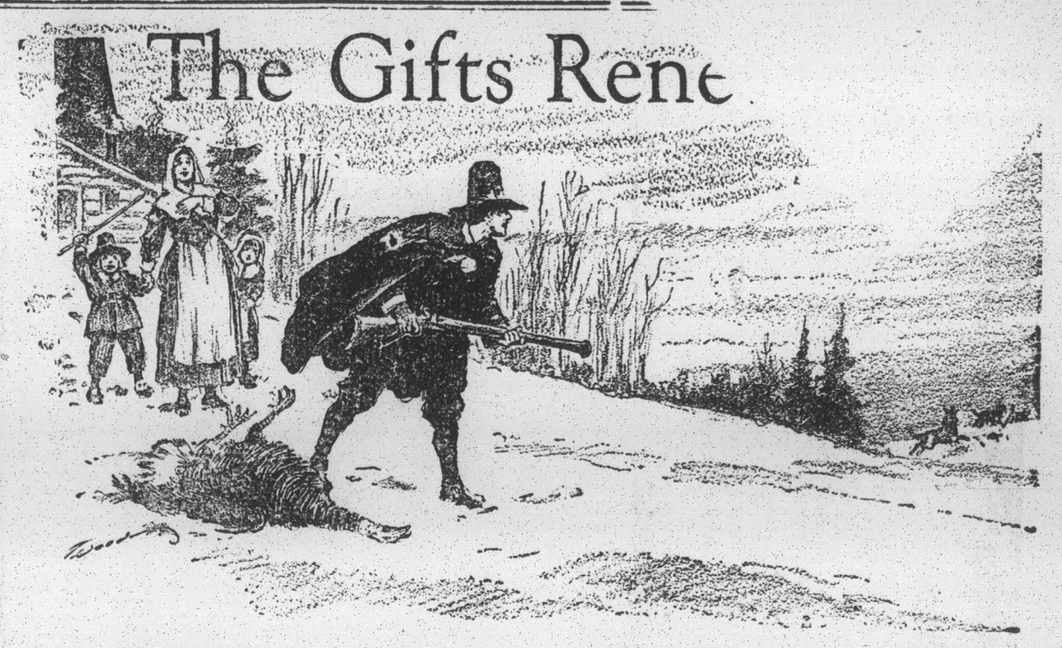
As a result of the "invention of inventions" idea the instability of our social and personal lives is increasing, and this social lag is becoming more acute because of the tradition of rigidity and "institutional inertia". Many examples of this disparity between technological progress and the advance of social institutions are brought into our consciousness daily. We see the ineffectiveness of our laws in dealing with new conditions brought about by the machine age; the church has not yet adjusted itself to the city; our international relationships have lagged far behind the development in communications; our education system has failed to meet the needs of everyday life.

When we consider in detail the effects of inventions we can explain many of our social conditions, including the so-called "crime waves" which are merely manifestations of new laws or incrase in the use of these inventions, e.g. the increase in traffic arrests corresponds with the increase in the number of automobiles.

Interesting observations regarding inventions was that a third of a century is required for the average invention to become successful and widespread. This is, in many cases, the direct result of pressure brought by large business interests whose profits would suffer thru new inventions benefiting the people. Television is now a menace to those developing technicolor in motion pictures.

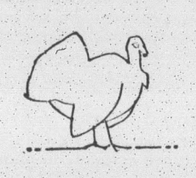
With the realization that the rugged individualist is definitely "out", we are fast coming to agree with progressive leaders that economic planning is the only course open to an intelligent democracy.

Last Tuesday's meeting markt the last in a series, which has presented Mr. Lyons leading stimulating discussions of modern problems. Mrs. D. H. Horner, who has been chairman of the group, plans another series following the holiday season.



In fields but lately seared by summer's drought,
Where famine seemed to lay its withering hand,
A miracle has come to still our doubt
And spread a glad Thanksgiving through the land.

Unseen beneath the drab brown coat she wore,
The soil grew rich to nurture other seeds.
Then autumn rains released the hidden store
In verdant growths, to fill our winter needs.



So, God of Wisdom, may we learn to build
In quiet faith, through even darkest days;
Assured our destiny will be fulfilled
Through Thy inscrutable and wondrous ways.

$4,000.00 Improvement To Local Bank Bldg.

Bank of America at Ocean Beach will shortly redecorate the entire bank building inside and out, as well as remodel the store room at 4994 Newport avenue, changing the front of that portion of the building, to a plate glass modern store front instead of the present recessed type of entrance which gives little display opportunity for the occupants.

An alteration permit in amount of $4,000 was granted the Capitol Co. the first of the week to carry out the improvements.

Large Newspaper Press To Be Installed Today

This week end The Ocean Beach News expects to install a 4-page Cottrell newspaper press purchased last week from the Long Beach Argus who have installed a Duplex.

With the inereasing subscription list and prospects good for more readers all the time locally, we have thought it best to cut down on the time in printing our paper, which can also be done in a more satisfactory manner. With the installation of this drum cylinder we will be able to cut our actual printing time of the News, after pages are set and made ready, to about one-third the time it has been taking for this part of the work. Our new press will also handle placards and poster printing of any size that previously we were limited in getting out on our platen presses, therefore the size was restricted. Now the maximum size for posters will be 30x44 inches and for placards the full size of sheets received from the paper houses.

According to present plans the new equipment will be received and set up Friday and Saturday.

Splendid Shows Here For The Holidays

Point Loma and North Shore Beach folks need not go to San Diego to see the finest shows that have yet been released for showing. The management reports they have billed the following:

"The Big Broadcast of 1937" as advertised elsewhere in this issue, comes November 26-27-28, and those who have seen it report it be an exquisite musical production of great beauty and charm, holding intense interest thruout the picture.

For the Christmas holidays "The Great Ziegfeld" will be shown and this picture besides portraying the important happenings and love of this master producer, has marvelous scenes that are not excelled in any other production.

New Year's time will bring "Anthony Adverse" which we presume is a very different type picture though with outstanding interest thruout.

MACONIC DANCE NOV. 21st.

Point Loma Masonic dance on Saturday nite, Nov. 21. All Masons, Eastern Stars and families.

S.D. Herald Favors Pier More Than New Jail Site

THE JAIL

"But we do not intend to let City Manager Flack get away with nothing but roses in this issue of The Herald. We want to make a few remarks about the new jail.

"We still believe that the Flack idea of a new jail on the waterfront is wrong.

"The new jail should be built in co-operation with the county on top of the present county jail at the courthouse. Three stories can be added to this jail at a cost to the city of only a part of the $185,000 which the city is asked to spend for a new city jail. What we will get out of it is a better jail, a downtown location, better facilities for emergency work, lower cost of up-keep, better supervision and a place for prisoners where they will not run the danger of mayhem and murder.

"We think that Flack should give his decision about the waterfront site for the jail a new consideration, and see if he cannot work out a deal with the county. If he can do this, he will save money for the city taxpayers, keep the jail on this side of the railroad tracks and the waterfront arterial highways, help out the police department and give the citizenry better service.

"With the money that Flack can save by putting the new city jail on top of the present county jail he can build the Ocean Beach fishing pier which the people of that section have wanted for years and which will be of inestimable benefit to them.

"The whole city wants Ocean Beach to have that pier, because the whole city—the whole county—will benefit from it. It is one of the few projects we have heard of which is wholly meritorious. And it means municipal recognition of one of its most important suburbs, and one which is growing in importance every month. Flack can give Ocean Beach its pier, build a new jail, and probably have a couple of dimes left over if he follows this plan.

'New Imperialist War' Coming, Says Voroshiloff

THAT a new "imperialist" war is coming soon was the opinion expressed by Soviet Defense Commissar Klementi E. Voroshiloff in an address at the 19th annual celebration of the Russian revolution, and he declared Russia would be ready to defend itself adequately in the conflict.

Voroshiloff

"The worst enemies of the toilers—imperialists of every shade and denomination — are continuing frenzied preparations for new pillage and usurpations," Voroshiloff said, "and the implacable enemies are preparing to attack Russia.

"The soviet union is firmly determined that its Red army be prepared to rout the enemy on whatever territory they may dare to appear.

"While defending the cause of peace, the soviet government is working ceaselessly to strengthen its defense power. Never will the enemies and incendiaries of war succeed in crossing the sacred and inviolate borders of the land of the soviets.

"The people of the U. S. S. R. now are more than prepared to deliver a crushing blow at all who may dare to encroach on the independence, wealth and honor of our state."

Spanish Government Flees From Madrid

WHILE the Fascist insurgents were smashing their way into Madrid and hurling shells among its chief buildings, the Socialist government of Spain, headed by Premier Fancisco Largo Caballero, fled from the capital and set itself up in Valencia on the Mediterranean coast. The capture of Madrid by the rebels seemed certain and this, it was believed, would be followed by recognition of the Fascist government by several powers, including Portugal and Italy and perhaps Germany. The first nation to accord this recognition was the Central American republic of Salvador.

It is not to be assumed that this would end the civil war, immediately or soon. Caballero, it was reported, believed the loyalists could best continue the struggle from the south, and it was claimed they had strong concentrations at Valencia, Cartegena, Alicante and Albacete. Moreover, there were indications that they would soon receive open aid from Russia and perhaps France. Leon Blum, the French premier, told a Socialist meeting that he was ready to scrap the non-intervention pact and help Caballero if Great Britain would join in such action. This caused consternation among the British statesmen.

Fighting in the suburbs of Madrid was continuous and bloody. The casualties on both sides were heavy, and the Fascist bombardment by artillery and planes killed and wounded hundreds in the center of the city. The Socialist defenders had been ordered to hold their posts regardless of losses, and they fought bravely and stubbornly.

Princess Juliana Will Be Married on January 7

IT WAS officially announced in Amsterdam that Crown Princess Juliana of the Netherlands and Prince Bernhard zu Lippe-Biesterfeld will be married on January 7. There will be a civil ceremony in the town hall of The Hague followed by a church ceremony in the cathedral of St. James.

Navy and Army Growth Noted in Reports

SECRETARY of the Navy Claude Swanson, who it is believed may retire from the cabinet, made his annual report to the President showing that the navy had made considerable progress in its program to build up to full treaty strength.

At the end of the 1936 fiscal year last June 30, the secretary said, the navy had under construction 79 vessels. Further, the 1937 appropriations act provided for the building of 18 vessels as replacements for over-age ships and for the beginning of construction in 1937 of two battleships. The capital ships are to be built only in the event battleships replacement construction is commenced by great Britain or Japan, the other signatories to the London treaty of 1930.

The secretary emphasized the need for auxiliary vessels, which service and supply combat vessels, as necessary to the maximum efficiency of the fleet. Present auxiliary vessels are old and unfit and should be repaced with modern craft, he said.

Chief of Staff Malin Craig reported to Secretary of War Woodring that the army in the second year of its five-year rebuilding program had gained ground toward its objective—a defense establishment up to the minimum needs of the nation.

"Our military establishment is of a type that—conforming strictly to our national policy—is designed for defense and is unsuitable for aggression," Craig said. "This fact may not be clearly understood by our people. Our establishment is of a character exclusively its own, essentially distinct from the military establishments maintained abroad and now in the course of vast expansion."

Ship Workers' Strike May Be Settled

THROUGH the efforts of Edward F. McGrady, assistant secretary of labor and the department's chief conciliator, the strike of maritime workers that tied up a large part of the shipping on the Pacific, Atlantic and Gulf coasts may be settled amicably. Negotiations between the shipowners and the union leaders were resumed in San Francisco, and in Washington Secretary Perkins said she was hopeful that a just agreement would be reached.

E. F. McGrady

On the Pacific coast the strikers had already consented to ease the plight of stranded passengers and release perishable cargoes. The joint strike committee recommended that their membership return strike-bound vessels to home ports. This promised relief for 600 stranded passengers and 900 strikers in Honolulu as well as for hundreds of maritime men idle in Atlantic and gulf ports.

Rear Admiral Harry G. Hamlet of the federal maritime commission had been compelled to postpone twice his fact finding inquiry but finally got it started.

Peace Move in Labor Federation Fails

FOR a day or two it seemed that the two factions in the American Federation of Labor might get together before the convention opening in Tampa on November 16. But plans for a conference between President William Green and John L. Lewis, leader of the C. I. O., fell through when the former said he had no power to reinstate the suspended unions. Lewis and his chief supporters held a two day meeting in Pittsburgh, after which he said:

"The convention will determine the future of the C. I. O. If it supports the arbitrary and insolent attitude of the executive council, that will be one thing. If it shows a disposition to give consideration of the fixed principles of the C. I. O., that will be another thing."

Mr. Lewis didn't say so explicitly, but "another thing" will be a war for domination of American labor.

Wage Increases and Dividends Declared

MAJOR producers of steel, led by the Carnegie-Illinois Steel corporation, largest subsidiary of United States Steel, and the Columbia Steel company, west coast member of the same group, announced wage increases averaging 10 per cent and in some cases running as high as 25 per cent, which will add about $80,000,000 a year to the industry's payroll. In most instances the increases were to take effect November 16. According to compilations of the American Iron and Steel institute they will affect 526,700 employees throughout the country.

Committees acting for employees at more than a dozen plants rejected the offer, demanding higher pay. Negotiations in these cases are therefore continued.

Directors of numerous big corporations authorized special dividends to stockholders and wage bonuses to workers that will release many millons of dollars. This is in pursuance of the policy of avoiding so far as possible the stiff levies imposed on undistributed profits under the revenue act of 1936; and also, in most cases, in recognition of improved business.

Edmund E. Day Elected President of Cornell

CORNELL university at Ithaca, N. Y., is to have a new president in the person of Dr. Edmund E. Day, an internationally known social scientist and economist. He will assume office June 30 next on the retirement of Dr. Livingston Farrand. Doctor Day, who is 53 years old, is a graduate of Dartmouth and has taught there and at Harvard and the University of Michigan. He is best known to the educational world as the director for the social sciences of the Rockefeller Foundation and director for general education of the general education board.

Roosevelt's Victory at Polls Unprecedented

"WE LIKE your New Deal policies and have complete confidence in your administration. Go as far as you like."

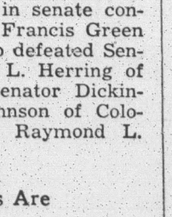
President Roosevelt

That in effect was the message sent to Franklin Delano Roosevelt by more than twenty-six million American men and women when they voted to continue him in the Presidency for another four years. It was the most tremendous victory ever scored by a Presidential candidate since the days of James Monroe, for Mr. Roosevelt captured the 523 electoral votes of 46 states. Only Maine and Vermont, with five and three electoral votes respectively, were won by Landon and Knox, the Republican candidates. Their popular vote, when all returns are in, and tabulated, may be sixteen and a half million.

The amazing New Deal landslide is looked upon by most unbiased observers not as a Democratic party victory, but a personal triumph for President Roosevelt, an expression of confidence in him and a recognition of the improvement in the country's business and industry. It was so overwhelming that the President may well consider he has been given carte blanche to do as he pleases in carrying his policies on to their logical ends. What he may please to do depends largely on pending decisions by the Supreme Court of the United States on New Deal legislation.

President Roosevelt, moreover, will have at his command a congress more heavily Democratic than were the last two, for the lingering hopes of the Republicans that they could capture enough seats to enable them, in conjunction with conservative Democrats, to put up effective resistance to New Deal measures, were not realized. The New Deal majority in the new senate will be about five to one, and in the house it will be almost four to one. The few Republicans will be permitted to take part in debate, but when it comes to a vote the congress will be virtually a one-party affair.

Incidentally, John N. Garner, who was scarcely mentioned during the hectic campaign, was re-elected vice president and will preside over the senate again. He took no real part in the battle, just riding along with his chief.



John N. Garner

Among the well-known Republican senators unseated by the upheaval are Daniel O. Hastings of Delaware, Lester J. Dickinson of Iowa, Jesse H. Metcalf of Rhode Island and Robert D. Carey of Wyoming. The one gain by that party was the Massachusetts seat won by Henry Cabot Lodge II, grandson of the noted senator. He succeeded in defeating Gov. James M. Curley, Democratic boss of the state. The Michigan seat of the late James Couzens was won by Representative Prentiss M. Brown, who beat Former Gov. W. M. Brucker. William E. Borah of Idaho, Arthur Capper or Kansas and Charles L. McNary of Oregon, all listed as Republicans, were re-elected; and so was George Norris of Nebraska who ran this year as an independent with the approval of Mr. Roosevelt. Minnesota Democrats meekly accepted the wrecking of their state ticket by New Deal orders and helped elect Ernest Lundeen, Farmer-Laborite, to the senate. New Hampshire, the only state in which the Presidential vote was at all close, sends a Republican to the senate in the person of Gov. H. Styles Bridges. Other governors who won in senate contests were Theodore Francis Green of Rhode Island, who defeated Senator Metcalf; Clyde L. Herring of Iowa, victor over Senator Dickinson, and Ed C. Johnson of Colorado, who defeated Raymond L. Sauter.

Most Governorships Are Won by Democrats

AT LEAST 25 states elected Democratic governors, and the number may be 27. In only three were the Republican nominees winners. William Langer, independent, won the governorship of North Dakota, from which he was ousted some time ago. Elmer Benson, Farmer-Laborite, was victorious in Minnesota, and Philip F. LaFollette, Progressive, in Wisconsin. New York re-elected Gov. Herbert Lehman, but he ran far behind President Roosevelt. Gov. Henry Horner of Illinois, Democrat, also won, but his vote, too, was far less than that for the head of the ticket.

Roosevelt May Make Trip to Buenos Aires

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT, leaving Hyde Park for Washington to "try to balance the budget," as he said, authorized the announcement that on November 17 he would start on a cruise on the warship Indianapolis for a rest of about four weeks, and that it was possible he might go to Buenos Aires, Argentina, to open the Pan-American peace conference on December 1. He may also visit Rio de Janeiro.

100,000 Miles of Fence

The longest barricade on record was the 100,000 miles of fence bult in Australia about 20 years ago to protect it from a plague of rabbits, tens of millions of which overran the country and at times devastated vast areas of fertile land, not only eating all crops, grasses, roots and bushes, but even the bark of the trees.—Collier's Weekly.

Ingenious Nawab

About 30 years ago in Rajkot, India, the Nawab of Junagadh held a reception during which, for the first time, he never moved from his throne. The guests were suspicious, yet he constantly smiled at them and seemed to be enjoying himself. And he was. He was asleep. Having had too much opium before the reception, he had had his court artist paint a gay, happy smile on his face so he could be present and still take his much - needed nap. — Collier's Weekly.

Bedtime Story for Children

By THORNTON W. BURGESS

THE ROBBERS DECIDE TO FIGHT

WHEN one of the young robber rats at the meeting of all the rats in the big barn which Billy Mink had visited boasted that he never had seen anyone he couldn't hide from, all the other young rats nodded their heads in approval. You see they prided themselves on knowing every hiding place in that big barn, and they never had known an enemy small enough to follow them to these hiding places. So when the gray, old leader of that robber gang said that unless he was greatly mistaken they were likely to have a chance to see someone they couldn't hide from, they at once demanded to know what he meant.

"Knowledge of Life Is Obtained Only Through Experience," He Began.

The old leader looked around the circle of rats waiting for him to speak. There were big rats, little rats, and middle-sized rats. There were rats gray with age, and sleek young rats. He counted noses. Every rat of the tribe, save only the babies too small to leave the nests, and the one whom Billy Mink had caught, was present. In the faces of the gray old rats he could see worry. Like himself they understood the danger they were in. In the faces of the younger rats there was no worry. It was plain to see that they felt quite confident of being able to take care of themselves. Never in all their lives had they met an enemy they could not run away from, and he knew they didn't believe such an enemy existed.

"Knowledge of life is obtained only through experience," he began. "You who are so sure you can hide from this new enemy are confident because you are ignorant. Cats and dogs you do not fear because you can go where they can not follow, but this mink who has found our den can follow where any of you, even the smallest, can go."

"But if he does not see us hide how can he find us?" squeaked a sharp-nosed young rat.

"A mink does not have to see in order to follow," retorted the gray old leader. "You cannot move without leaving a scent which he can follow by means of his wonderful nose. All he had to do is to find where you have been and then follow straight to where you are hiding. He can run faster than you can and longer than you can. There is no escape from him, once he sets out to catch one of you. The best fighter among us is no match for him alone. I tell you, friends, our tribe is in danger. It is in the greatest danger it ever has faced. I have called you together to make this plain to you and to get your ideas as to what we should do."

For a few moments no one spoke. The worried look on the faces of the older rats had crept into the faces of the younger rats. Finally a scarred old fighter spoke. "It seems to me," said he, "there is only one thing to do, and that is fight. What one of us alone can not do, all of us together can. I propose that the next time this enemy appears we all attack him together."

To this all the rats agreed.

MOTHER'S COOK BOOK

TIMELY RECIPES

A GOOD stuffing to use for fish is the following, which all will like:

Pickle and Caper Stuffing.

Mix thoroughly the following ingredients: One cupful of cracker crumbs, one-half teaspoonful of salt, one-fourth teaspoonful of paprika or a mixture of paprika and cayenne, one teaspoonful each of chopped onion, minced parsley, capers and pickles finely chopped; add one-fourth cupful of melted butter. This makes a dry stuffing; if liked moist, add a little milk. If capers are not liked, substitute a teaspoonful of lemon juice.

For a delicious filling for sandwiches, cream peanut butter with water, using one-half cupful of the butter and one-fourth cupful of water, hot. When well blended add one-half cupful of chopped pickle. Sour chopped pickle added to salmon salad improves it. Freshly grated coconut is also an addition to salmon salad.

Carrot Soup.

Wash, scrape and slice thin twelve medium-sized carrots. Place in a saucepan with two tablespoonfuls of butter, season with salt and cayenne pepper and a teaspoonful of sugar. Cook slowly, turning constantly until the carrots begin to brown. Add two cupfuls of good broth and simmer slowly until the carrots are glazed. Remove, press through a fruit press or strainer, return to the broth and simmer until hot, then serve.

Apple Jam With Cinnamon Candy.

Take four and one-half cupfuls or two and one-fourth pounds of ripe unpeeled apples, cut into quarters and add one-half cupful of water. Cover tightly and simmer for five minutes or until the apples are soft. Put through a sieve to remove the skins. Measure apples, sugar, five cupfuls or two and one-fourth pounds, add the fruit and sugar with two-thirds of a cupful of cinnamon candies, bring to a full rolling boil in a kettle over a hot fire, boil hard one minute, remove from the fire and add one-fourth of a cupful of pectin. Skim and pour quickly. Cover with a thin film of paraffin; when cold add another.

BIG SANDY ROLLS

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

THE old Big Sandy rolls along
As though the world were nowhere wrong,
Rolls as it rolled in other years
Before the doors of pioneers,
Rolls as it rolled when men were men,
For there were few complainers then,
Rolls as it rolled when womankind
Some good to do could always find.

The old Big Sandy rolls away
Hour after hour, day after day,
Rolls as it rolled before men thought
They toiled too hard who something wrought,
Rolls as it rolled when fruits and flow'rs
Were counted oftener than hours,
Rolls as it rolled when work was found
A meeting place, not battle ground.

The old Big Sandy rolls along
And knows that nothing's really wrong,
Rolls as it rolled, while men must burn
Their fingers, then to truth return,
Rolls as it rolled, as age has smiled
So often at a wayward child,
Rolls as it rolled down through the past,
And as it shall roll till the last.

THE LANGUAGE OF YOUR HAND

By Leicester K. Davis

© Public Ledger, Inc.

HAVE you sometimes "felt" the leads of the inner self prompting you to action in a definite kind of occupation, giving you "hunches" which you felt impelled to follow? Your hand, if its type be read correctly, may be relied upon as a guide to the activities and surroundings in which nature has fitted you to function best.

The Spiritual Type of Hand.

You will have little trouble in placing this type by its beautiful but seemingly fragile structure. The fingers and thumb are notable in their graceful proportions, the nail tips being well tapered, with the nails themselves long, oval in form and delicately set. The thumb of this type is often extremely flexible, and the first or nail joint may be bent backward readily toward the wrist. The palm and underside portions of the hand are often extremely pliable and are never overfleshed.

The spiritual type of hand, although the most beautiful of the seven types, is the least practical of them all. Its possessor is sure to live on a receptive plane which sometimes confers extraordinary psychic powers.

The man or woman with this type of hand is seldom of robust constitution, and this, combined with a tendency to assume a visionary attitude toward worldly things, makes the selection of an understanding, practical mate and associates of supreme importance if health and prosperity and happiness are to be assured.

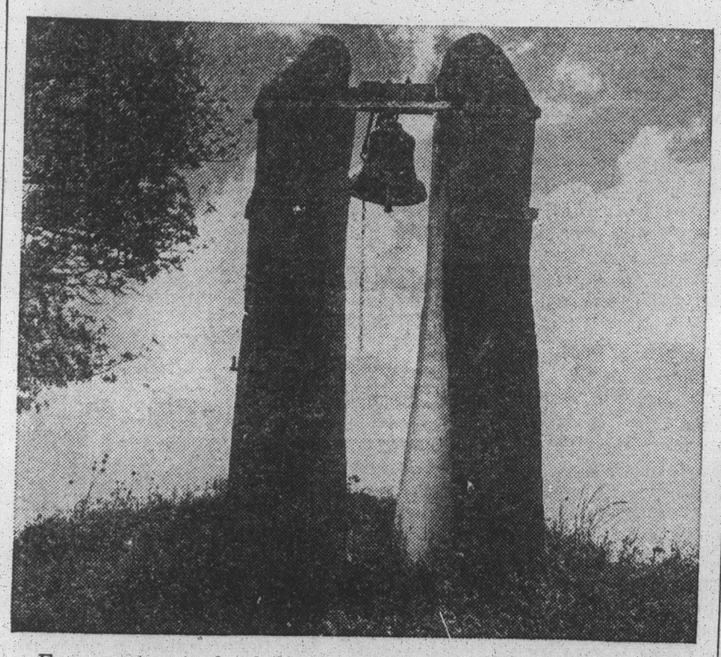
Calls Workers to the Cane Fields



For a century and a half this ancient bell has summoned workers to the sugar cane fields of St. Croix, Virgin Islands. Once an unhappy signal to the ears of slaves, it now sounds the starting, dinner and quitting hours for the native employees of one of the government-owned Virgin Islands company's sugar estates.

Left-Handers

Dr. H. H. Newman of Chicago university, biologist, studied the hands of 100 students—50 of each sex—and found first that there are all grades of left-handedness and second that left-handers not only can use their right hand better than right-handers can use their left, but that the palm and finger prints on left-handers are more like their right than the left of right-handers is like their right.

WE SHOULD HAVE A LOCAL COUNCILMAN

The nearness of a spring election of city councilmen is drawing the attention of some of our civic workers, and Point Loma and this immediate beach area would do well to look around to find suitable material to fill the office of city councilman, now filled by Al Bennett of La Jolla.

The would-be powers at the city hall are suggesting names from the first district, though our section, so far, is receiving no recognition and possibly will not unless we arouse ourselves to the responsibility and realization that we get what we go after with a united front. There are enough votes on Point Loma and at Mission Beach to elect a man of our choice, but he must be a person of outstanding integrity and responsibility or it will be useless to make the race.

EUROPE'S NIGHTMARE OF WAR

Entire Europe seems to be fomenting under the stress of war; this is clearly revealed from every present aspect. The nations of the continent are lining up as Communist or Fascist, either in the constitution of their governments or in their active sympathies. The immediate occasion for their disputes is the civil war in Spain.

It will be remembered that nearly all the continental governments and that of Great Britain joined in an agreement of non-intervention, but finally that pact seemed to be about played out. Russia now has denounced the agreement and declares she reserves freedom to help the Madrid government. She accuses Portugal, Germany and Italy of aiding the Fascist Spanish rebels. The accused nations deny the Soviet charges and retort that Russia already has sent many ship-loads of war supplies and amunitions to the Spanish loyalists. Josef Stalin, dictator of Soviet Russia, will be the man to fire, for starting Europe's war guns, and he is reported to be convinced that another great conflict is unavoidable.

Italy's "olive branch" has grown out of an immense forest of 8,000,000 bayonets. Great Britain is determined to keep out of the Communist-Fascist conflict, if possible. Nazi Germany and Fascist Italy have buried their differences for the time being, and reached an agreement on a united policy. Socialists in France allege that a shipment of sub-machine guns from the United States has been added to the secret armaments of the Croux de Feu in preparation for a civil war in France.

Whoever is able to yield a Sceptre of Peace in Europe, one for permanent effect and permanent in character, such as will eventually grip the whole world and draw it into international peace, will have fixed the modus operandi for an enduring civilization. That man, if he tries hard and succeeds, the world will ever adore him; if he fails, we must sympathize with him but never give up for, in the name of Peace, we have now had enough of this cruel nightmare of war!

The Bay Bridge just completed over San Francisco bay, is truly entitled to rank as one of the wonders of the world, not excepting Nebuchadnessar's great hanging gardens of Babylon. This bridge is three times longer than the Firth of Forth bridge in Scotland, known as the longest bridge in the world. Some interesting statistics go down in history of this marvelous structure, eight miles long, with over five miles over water; costing the great sum of 77 million dollars. The Southern Pacific Railroad company will have the collecting of all tolls over the bridge, which will be 65 cents per auto, including four people besides the driver. About three years were required to complete the bridge, and the work of which was very dangerous, claimed many lives. Twelve men lost their lives in the under-construction of the bridge. A diver working on the foundation received $15,000 per year, and a dollar per foot after the first 100 feet of diving. One diver made 242 feet in one dive. This magnificent bridge was built under the State Bridge authority; San Francisco and the State of California financed the work. The dedication of the new water-way was held Thursday, November 12, 1936. There has been over 70 years' ferry service which will be continued.

Distribution by the different countries, whose commodities with such increasing amounts, is a great transportation problem. Even though the auto trucking business has claimed a remarkable share of the freight and express hauling, increase in traffic is forcing the nation's railroads to buy more than 150,000 new freight cars during the next 12 months. Several of the prominent railroads have already given orders for giant locomotives and other equipment. Railroad and shippers were said to be experiencing the first car shortage since 1923. This is all realized from an extraordinary increase in population in United States, which, up to July 1, of this year was 128,429,000; an increase in one year of 908,000. This large increase is due in part to an excess of births over deaths. Immigration for the same year also was approximately 8,000 souls. United States has 32 percent of the world's railroads which is a total approximately 254,882 miles; yet the United States has less than six percent of the world's land area and less than six percent of its population.

Here is the "after scene" of a drunken woman picked up at the curb and carried in an ambulance to quiet privacy, best related by Irving S. Cobb: "It is the next morning after 'drunken glory.' It's a stench, an obscenity, vain wastefulness, an unutterable indecency. It's a machine which sucks in at the hopper the beauty, the youth, the hope of the world and spews out from the spout the finished product—broken bodies, ruined men, blind eyes, maddened brains; dead and dying souls, men and women!" What a picture of a woman, perhaps a mother! Yet injustice brings about its own doom. Affliction and trials, disappointments and failures, disgrace and loss. The racketeer rolls in wealth while the honest toiler often lacks bread for himself and family. There is no disease in the world for which alcohol is a cure. It does undeniably cause thousands of cases of diseases. Its use is ruinous to the kidneys, liver, heart and smaller blood vessels, and gives rise to that most common fatality, high blood pressure. Take your choice!

Point Loma Squad Leads

Clinching at least a tie for the championship of the Metropolitan league, the Point Loma high school football squad turned in a brilliant game to decisively repel the second-place Oceanside team 19-0 last Friday at Ross field. In their final scheduled game of the season, the Lomans kept complete control over the Pirates throughout the greater part of the battle.

The scoring was well distributed, occuring in the first, second and last quarters. Isom plunged over from the one inch line after a 60 yard drive; Prodonavich crossed on a 16 yard end-around following a 40 yard march; and Lutes intercepted a pass on his own 45, returned it 20 and then forward-passed to Le Barron for the score. Lutes converted on the second touchdown. Oceanside came to life in the start of the fourth period and displayed a nice passing attack until Lutes intercepted.

Point Loma ends its loop play with a record of five victories, one tie, and no defeats; they are tied in percentage with Escondido high which has four wins and one tie.

As a result of the tie between these two, the eyes of the entire league will be upon the Escondido-Grossmont set-to scheduled for this Friday at Grossmont. If Grossmont wins, which is quite possible, Point Loma gains clear right to the title; if the Cougars come out ahead they will be deadlocked all around with the Pointers, and a play-off will be probable.

Light practice is continued at Point Loma in anticipation of further action.

At the close of chapter a dancing party was given honoring Gladys Nelson and Nels Berg. Hazel Lathrop served as hostess.

Business Far Greater Seen In Record

That a great, irrepressible groundswell of business prosperity is sweeping across the nation is apparent, today, even to those who are careful not to view things too optimistically.

Let's look, as they say, at the record, being written by all manner of reports from authoritative sources.

The steel industry pours millions more dollars into workers' pockets with a ten percent wage increase. The biggest unit in the motor car industry announces an employee Christmas bonus of ten millions, and a five-cents-an-hour pay raise.

Stocks bubble upward to six year highs, with a day's business of three million shares not uncommon. Dividend distributions literally shower on the country, smashing all records.

In California, a building boom spurts 128 percent ahead of last year, and the Federal Reserve bulletin reports customers flocking into our stores and shops at a rate 15.9 percent above a year ago.

Another Federal Reserve report adds everything up and concludes that the nation's general level of activity is at a six year peak and going up. And of the whole picture, even the conservative U.S. Chamber of Commerce says, "It is necessary to go back a decade to find another period in which business momentum had within itself equal elements of strength."

In terms of finance, all this may be called a "bullish outlook for business." But eighty-five per cent of all our national income goes to those who work for a living. In terms of humanity, since the promise is of new jobs, new hope and abundance and security for millions, it is the brightest "outlook for human happiness" that any nation ever faced.

26th Annual Firemen's Ball At Mission Beach

San Diego firemen will stage their 26th annual ball at the Mission Beach ballroom on Thanksgiving eve, Wednesday, November 25th.

Proceeds of the ball will go into the funds of the Firemen's Relief association, sponsors of the yearly function and will be used to provide aid to firemen who are injured or who become sick.

Plans for the 1937 dance are all complete and the best time ever is promised by directors of the association. Capt. Chas. Hauser, chairman of the committee on arrangements has pledged that patrons who attend this year's dance will find the evening a most enjoyable one in all respects. Many special features have been planned for the entertainment of dance fans who attend the ball.

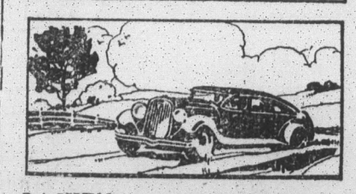
Music for the occasion will be furnished by Harvey Urban's orchestra. Featured will be Frances Elium, vocalist, who also is well known in San Diego.

Members of the committee who also comprise the Board of directors of the Firemen's Relief association are president, Batt. Chief Robert Conard; secretary, Capt. Bert Shankland; treasurer, Capt. Chas. Hauser; trustees, Capt. H. C. Field and G. D. Peterson.

Hints for Motorists

By C. R. Strouse

Director, School of Automobiles, International Correspondence Schools



WHEN a car equipped with a honeycomb radiator shows signs of over-heating, it is frequently due to rust and other foreign matter in the radiator. Much of this can usually be cleaned out by removing the upper and lower hose connections and forcing water under pressure through the radiator in a direction opposite to the natural flow, by means of a hose applied to the bottom opening. At the same time, to loosen the rust, a piece of board about 6 inches wide and 12 inches long should be held against the face of the radiator core and struck with light hammer blows, shifting the board around to different positions. The board will prevent damage to the core.

THE THEOSOPHICAL SOCIETY: POINT LOMA

"Can Man See Into The Future?" is the title of the forum address to be given next Sunday afternoon at three o'clock in the Temple of Peace by Lafayette Plummer, professor of mathematical symbology, Theosophical university, Theosophical International headquarters, Point Loma. When asked this question recentlyPlummer replied: "Yes, indeed, we are doing it all the time. We have our time tables for the tides and for the positions of astronomical bodies. But while these things are not usually referred to when we discuss familiarity with the things to be, preferring as we do to limit our considerations to the visions of crystal gazers, seers, and the like, we should look for the key to the answer of our question in those instances where scientific knowledge and investigation have enabled us to foretell coming events with mathematical accuracy."

The lecturer will discuss the psychological "sensitives" and explain what it is they "see" when they foretell events that sometimes do take place. As usual questions and comments from the audience will be invited at the conclusion of the presentation of the subject.

GIRL SCOUTS COOKIE DRIVE BENEFIT MOUNTAIN CAMP

Ocean Beach and Point Loma Girl Scouts under direction of Mrs. Theresa Price, Mrs. Naomi Dick and Mrs. Bert Slater are doing their part in the county-wide cookie sale and have been busily engaged for many days obtaining orders. Deliveries are to be made between now and the holidays.

Goal in the cookie drive is 15,000 boxes, with proceeds going into a fund for improvements and additions to the Girl Scouts' mountain playground, Camp Tapawingo.

Each box contains nearly five dozen cookies of a kind that keep fresh for a long period. The boxes are attractively designed and are said to make most acceptable holiday gifts. The cookies bear the Girl Scout insignia.

Success of the cookie drive, it is announced, will establish this feature in place of the hot cross bun sale, heretofore conducted at Easter time.

In charge of the drive is a committee headed by Mrs. George Preston.

BABY BEATER GETS WELL DESERVED SENTENCE FINE

Judge Clarence F. Terry the first of the week sentenced George C. Proude, retired navy enlisted man, to six months in the city jail and to pay an additional fine of $1,000.00.

He was convicted of beating a 15-month old baby with a shoe, entering the home of Mrs. Anna Bouna, 5075 Narragansett Ave., Saturday night while the mother was out to the stores shopping. The man was found asleep in an adjoining room when she returned home.

Proude apparently was drink-crazed and the court is to be commended in giving him plenty of time in confinement to become entirely sober.

THE JUDGE SAYS:

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE CHURCHES

"Soul and Body" is the subject of the Lesson-Sermon on Sunday in all branches of The Mother Church, The First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, Massachusetts.

One of the Bible selections presents these verses from Luke: "And, behold, there was a woman which had a spirit of infirmity eighteen years, and was bowed together, and could in no wise lift up herself. And when Jesus saw her, he called her to him, and said unto her, Woman, thou art loosed from thine infirmity. And he laid his hands on her: and immediately she was made straight, and glorified God."

The Lesson-Sermon includes also this passage from "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "Do you say the time has not yet come in which to recognize Soul as substantial and able to control the body? Remember Jesus, who nearly nineteen centuries ago demonstrated the power of Spirit and said, 'He that believeth on me, the works that I do shall he do also,' and who also said, 'But the hour cometh, and now is, when the true worshippers shall worship the Father in spirit and in truth.'"

"Always blows the wrong way for me. I don't mind losing the timber. If it had caught him, I'd—" He checked himself suddenly. "Look here," he jerked, "why can't we help the wind along next night there's a blow—just give things a start down there?"

"What d'you mean? Burn him out?"

"Why not?"

McCrossen took the cigarette from his mouth but said nothing.

"Well?" sputtered Van Tambel. "Why don't you talk?"

"I don't fancy that kind of a job."

McCrossen shifted moodily in his saddle. "Bill Denison and I have got our differences—plenty of 'em. Some day I expect to iron 'em out with him. But it'll be done in daylight."

Van Tambel sneered. "Look out he don't get you and the girl both."

"He's welcome to, if the luck's his. Well"—the words came reluctantly—"I'll talk to Barney Rebstock. You'll have to pay him well."

After Van Tambel came back from the hospital, he reopened his office in Sleepy Cat.

"I thought you said the old devil couldn't get well," complained Pardaloe to Dr. Carpy.

Carpy was laconic. "He can't. Some day he'll crack up sudden."

But Van Tambel kept Jane so closely under his eye that she had no chance to see Denison.

One day her father took her in town on business. The volunteer fire fighters were clamoring for their pay, and Jane, knowing the details of the agreement with Pardaloe as to how much beer and "grub" should be provided, plus their pay, rode with her father, to town, to settle with Pardaloe.

"Bill," she said to Pardaloe, when the accounts had been straightened out, "I want to ask a question and I want the truth."

Pardaloe looked at her with shrewd benevolence. "Fire away, girl!"

"Why does my father hate Bill Denison so?"

Pardaloe shifted uneasily. "You won't like the truth, Miss Jane."

"Whether I like it or not, I want you to tell me, Bill," she said.

"Well, your dad wants the Spring ranch—started a fight for it at the Medicine Bend land office. Bill beat him there, so he goes up to Washington, and Bill has to sell off his cows to get money to fight and pay lawyers. 'Fore he got through, the boy had to sell everything but his shirt to keep his end up. Kind of tough."

"It was tough," assented Jane grimly. Her eyes were half closed and her lips compressed, as if to shout out unpleasant details.

Pardaloe warmed to his story. "If it wa'n't you, Miss Jane, an' your own dad, I'd call a man that'd act that way—well, wonder to me is, Bill never plugged him. Now don't cry; I told you you wouldn't like it."

Jane shook her head and brushed the tears from her eyes with a gesture of defiance. "Don't mind a little shower, Bill. You've told me what I asked for—the truth. Now I want to tell you something. But please keep my secret—will you, Bill?"

Pardaloe's huge, honest bulk, slow-moving jaws, and deep piercing eyes invited confidence. Jane had no difficulty in reposing it in the lanky ex-sheriff. "Shoot," was all he said.

Swiftly she told him of her first meetings with Denison, and of their rides together. She described how he had saved her life and how afterward her father had ridden over to the Denison ranch with Dave McCrosson, created a scene and forbade her ever again to see Denison.

"I'm watched now like a two-year-old child," she concluded, "and I'm rebellious!"

Pardaloe looked at her appraisingly. He observed the animation of her manner and the flash of her eye; he listened to the rapid flow of her words and the spirited way in which se spoke them. The old frontiersman looked at her as an artist might look on a flower; he could see, but couldn't quite understand, all that was hidden within it.

"I wish," said Jane, musing, almost as much to herself as to Pardaloe, "I knew just what to do."

"Do nothin'," suggest Pardaloe.

Jane bridled. "Do nothing! That isn't very pleasant to think about."

"You've got to realize your circumstances," he returned. "In the mess you're in all around out there, it's best for you to sit tight 'n' do nothin'. You don't know it, but you're settin' on a box of dynamite. You've got three men out there, all three desperate quick on the trigger. And it wouldn't take much to start airy one into action. There's your dad, McCrossen, and Bill Denison. If anythin' begins with three men like that, it won't stop till there's harm done."

"Do you expect me to act as peacemaker, Bill?"

"I didn't say that—'twouldn't be no sort of use. There'll be peace there when bobcats go back on jack rabbits."

"Well," sighed Jane, reluctant, "you know best, Mr. Pardaloe—"

"Bill."

"You know best, Bill. I may want to talk to you again."

"Any time, honey."

Riding home with her father, who rode slowly, she had plenty of time to think. And her thoughts were soberhued.

McCrossen was a thorn in her side. To meet him every day and be halfway pleasant was a daily strain.

He tried to make up to her. "I got off on the wrong foot with you, Jane," he said one day. The two were standing near the ranch-house door, in the sunshine. "I know that, all right. All I can say is, if there's anythin' I can do to square myself, I'm ready to do it whenever you say the word. Is that fair?"

Jane was looking up at the mountains. She answered without rancor; a mild manner must be her cue now.

A week passed. Van Tambel lay in bed. He had to send Jane to Medicine Bend to attend to some bank business there. To keep her under surveillance, Van Tambel ordered McCrossen to ride to Sleepy Cat with her. When Jane heard of the arrangements she flatly refused to go.

"What's a-matter with you, you damned cantankerous thing!" demanded her father huskily. "Ain't my foreman good enough for you to ride with?"

Jane's features set. "I won't ride with him," she declared crisply.

"Why not?" thundered her father, rising up in bed. "Oh!" he exclaimed, swearing violently, at a sudden twinge of pain. "Why won't you ride with him, you hussy?"

Jane drew herself up the least bit. Her father's rudeness stiffened her attitude. "If you want to know the real reason, I don't want him trying to kiss me on the way home after he's had too many drinks in the Red Front saloon. I won't ride with him. If he goes, I don't."

Finally Bull Page was assigned to escort the wayward Jane, and the two set off for town. Jane was most interested to get some news from Bull Page about Denison; but Bull had neither seen nor heard of him since the Gunlock Knob fire.

In Medicine Bend, Jane extended a note, drew some money, paid the hospital bills, and waited for the afternoon train home. When she got to Sleepy Cat it was ten o'clock at night, and no rig was at the station from the ranch. She was compelled to spend the night at the hotel. It was a long time afterward before she realized that the whole trip had been planned by her father and McCrossen for a purpose.

She rose early, breakfasted alone, and started out to pay the few remaining fire bills. She went first to Spott's place to pay for the beer. Spotts was out. "Ought to be back pretty soon," said Oscar. "He's got to be here pretty soon to let the bartender out for breakfast."

"I've an order to leave at Rubido's," said Jane. "I'll be back." She walked over to the general store, left her provision order for the wagon to pick up, and returned to Spott's barber shop. Jake, his crutches at his side, was sitting in his barber chair.

"Hello there, Miss! Well! How's things out at Gunlock?"

"About as usual, Jake. I've come to pay for the beer."

"No more fires botherin'?"

"Not at present. How much was the beer?"

"No hurry about that."

"Yes, but I want to clean it up."

"Thank you, ma'am," said the saloon keeper and barber as Jane counted out and handed him the money. "If I could only call my old side pardner back out of it,"—Spotts shook his head—"I wouldn't mind if I never got a durned cent for the beer."

"None of us will ever forget Panama, Jake."

"The damnedest, meanest, orniest fires that ever swept them hills," said Spotts, counting over the money perfunctorily. "Done more damage to the range—not to speak of losin' the best man we had in Sleepy Cat and cripplin' up the best man we had in the hills."

"Who was that, Jake?"

"Why, Bill Denison."

Jane started visibly. "Bill Denison?" she echoed in consternation. "What do you mean?"

"Well, you know he's in the hospital."

"I know nothing of the kind," exclaimed Jane sharply. She stood white as a sheet. "What has happened? Tell me!"

"Why, didn't you know his eyes is gone to hell?"

"What do you mean? What has happened? Tell me!"

Spotts started violently out of his torpor as he saw with amazement the effect of his news on his visitor. "Why, Carpy says his eyes got burned some gettin' through that Gunlock Knob fire. Then some son—" Jake checked himself. "Somebody set his ranch house afire last night and nearly burned him up. Ask Carpy: he'll tell you."

She hurried to the hotel. The doctor was out on a call. Jane hurried to McAlpin's barn, where she had left her pony, and rode straight up the hill to the hospital.

CHAPTER IX

"Where is he, Sister?"

"His room is on the second floor—218. Shall I show you the way?"

"If you please, Sister. I learned only a moment ago that he was here. I've heard of this dreadful ranch-house fire only this minute. Did he tell you how it happened, Sister?"

"He has hardly spoken since they brought him in. But Mr. Scott said it was getting out of the burning ranch house."

"How could that have happened? His eyes were scorched in saving me, Sister, from getting burned to death on Gunlock Knob."

"Oh, my dear."

"You don't know what terrible fires we've been having down our way."

"They've been terrible everywhere this fall."

"Do you think there is any chance to save his sight? Oh, Sister, can you imagine how I feel?"

"Dear heart, I do know how you feel. Of course I don't know a thing about the case, except that Dr. Carpy has given very strict orders about his care." She was too considerate to tell how worried she knew Carpy to be. "Of course his room is dark. And his eyes are bandaged. We like Mr. Denison so much—he's always been so kind to us with nice gifts. This is his room." The nurse laid her hand on the knob of the door. "Shall I go in with you?"

"Do, Sister," said Jane.

Sister opened the door. "Good-morning, Mr. Denison."

"Good-morning, Sister."

Jane, walking in on tiptoe behind her guide, heard his answer.

"Who's that with you, Sister?" Jane had stepped as lightly as possible; but his ears had detected her footsteps.

"I've brought you a visitor. I hope you're not cross," she added, banteringly.

"Who is visiting me?" he asked.

Jane had been gradually drawing closer to him. "Bill?"

He started violently. For an instant he was silent as if listening for more. Then he responded, low and strangely, "Jane?"

"Yes, Bill."

In the dark, her hand touched his arm. He caught both her hands, crushing them within his own, and drew one and the other hungrily to his lips. "Sister," he said, composed, yet eager, "can you find a chair, in the dark, for Miss Van Tambel?"

With the nurse gliding out of the room, Jane's hands crept over his shoulders, around his neck, and as his arms enfolded her, their lips met to give and to receive that for which words were not needed.

"I didn't want you to hear that I was in trouble till we knew more about it. How did you find out I was here, Jane?"

"Jake Spotts, Bill. I never dreamed of such a thing," she said tremulously. "He told me the ranch house was burned last night. Oh, Bill!"

"I think maybe my eyes will be all right in a couple of days. Ben Page has been working for me for a while. He got hold of Bob Scott to bring me in to see Doc Carpy—and the doctor sent me here." He felt her warm tears against his cheek. He kissed them away from her eyes. "Don't cry! There's nothing to cry over. I'll be all right when my eyes get better. Doctor says that won't be long. I wish you hadn't heard of it."

"I wish you'd never heard of me, Bill. To think of it, that I should have been the cause of starting all this trouble. Oh, why couldn't I have stayed home that dreadful day instead of riding into danger? I'll never, never forgive myself. And I'm ashamed to say it, Bill, but the real reason I rode up there was because I was just hungry for a sight of you—that was the real reason, Bill."

Denison only laughed. "Don't think you're the only one that was hungry for a sight. If I hadn't been scouting around the Knob trail where I knew you liked so much to ride, I'd never have caught sight of you. What then? Why, Jane, if you were burning in a fire, why shouldn't I jump in after you? What would be left for me?"

"Do your eyes hurt terribly, Bill?"

"Not when you're here, Jane."

"Oh, I know better. I know they do. And I can do nothing to help!"

He made light of her worry. There were more furtive tears, more earnest prayers, more submission from Jane. More happy laughs, more ardent embraces, more carefree cheer from Denison.

"Why, Bill," she protested at length, "one would think there was nothing the matter with you. And I am frightened to death."

"I was frightened to death myself till you came. It's not much fun sitting alone here in the dark. What frightens me most is the thought that if the worst should come, I'd lose you."

"You can never lose me, Bill. Remember that."

"Yes, but a blind man!" he exclaimed desperately. "Jane, I never could ask you to marry me blind—"

"There's only one way to keep me from marrying that good-for-nothing Bill Denison—that's to kill me and make me into dust—even then, I'd tremble under his feet. I would—just to annoy him."

Her tongue was light and happy when she said good-by, but her heart was dread with fear. She rode straight to Carpy's office; luckily she found him in.

"Doctor! I'm so worried about Mr. Denison—"

"So am I."

"You know what happened?"

"Said he got trapped in the ranch-house fire."

"Yes, but it was trying to save my life when his eyes first got hurt."

"Never said a blamed word about that."

"I was up on Gunlock Knob, and he rode up to get me through the fire, Doctor," she asked, unsteadily, "can't you save his eyes?"

The old surgeon looked at her sympathetically. "You're asking a hard question, Jane? There are times when a doctor can't tell much better than an outsider how things are coming out. Bill's in bad shape; I must admit that. But I'm doing everything under the sun I can for him."

After removing the tough portion of the center of a grapefruit and separating the pulp, place an after-dinner mint in the center of each half and chill. The mint gives the grapefruit a delicious flavor.

A little salt added to pumpkin sauce will greatly improve the flavor.

To braise roasts, steaks or chops first brown the meat, then put in a tightly covered utensil with very little water either on the top of stove or in oven and continue cooking slowly until meat is tender.

Cooked prunes stuffed with celery and nuts make a tempting salad. Stuffed prunes can also be used as a garnish for chops, roasts or steaks.

To prevent that hard crust forming on left-over cooked cereal pour a cup of cold water over it before placing in the refrigerator.
